International France

Springtime brings Asian art

۲

Annual specialist extravaganza held in Paris involves galleries, auction houses and museums

by Anne Crane

Printemps Asiatique is the Paris version of the longer-standing Asian Art in London and Asia Week New York. All annual events, they involve galleries, auction houses and museums joining together to mount a celebration of the rich cultural heritage of Asian art in their respective capitals.

Dealers hold gallery-based selling shows, auction houses hold their viewings and sales and museums and other institutions put on exhibitions or other special events. All this is accompanied by open evenings, lectures and other events aiming to make a focus for visiting Asian art enthusiasts and collectors.

Printemps Asiatique started in 2018 and this is the seventh edition running from June 6-13.

Timewise, this staging takes place against the background of two anniversaries of symbolic significance: celebrations of the 60th anniversary of diplomatic relations between France and China and the 100th anniversary of the establishment of the Ecole des Beaux Arts de l'Indochine in Vietnam.

This year there are 29 dealerships taking part including 11 from overseas (the US, Belgium and the UK). Many of the Parisian dealers have their own galleries where they can show their works but Printemps Asiatique also makes use of La Pagode. This distinctive pagodashaped building in the Parc Monceau district, which was the home of the famous Chinese dealer/collector CT Loo (1880-1957), is where many of the international dealers and some of the French dealers will have stands.

As this is one of the periods in the Paris art world calendar when auctions of Asian art traditionally take place, many firms put on dedicated sales in the capital.

Sales will be held at the Drouot auction centre (one of Printemps Asiatique's partners) and in other independent locations in the city, with II auction houses participating in the event.

A third sector of the event is the institutional element. This includes the Musée Guimet, the well-known National Museum of Asian Arts in Paris. It will be marking the 60 years of diplomatic relations between

42 | 25 May 2024

On June 11 at Drouot, Giquello will be offering Asian works from the collection of the Parisian Galerie Jacques Barrère as the gallery moves to focus on ancient Buddhist art. Three generations of the Barrère family – grandfather M Laden, father Jacques and son Antoine – are associated with Asian art. On offer from Giquello will be a range of Asian works from India, China, Japan, Tibet, Cambodia and Vietnam assembled over half a century.

Highlights include a rare mother of pearl incrusted console table made for the imperial palace at Hue in Vietnam dating from the 18th-19th century, estimated at €40,000-60,000, and this wooden figure of a horse from the Han dynasty (206BC to 220AD) featuring traces of polychrome decoration, which is guided at €60,000-80,000. Siguelloetassocies.fr

Above: the Asian Art sale to be held by Pescheteau-Badin at Drouot on June 13 falls into two parts: the first given over to Japanese works of art and the second to works from China and south-east Asia. Included in the second section will be this spinach green jade marriage bowl dating from the 18th/19th century and carved with peonies, lingzhi fungus and nandina (often associated with New Year or birthday celebrations). The estimate is €15,000-20,000. pescheteau-badin.com

Right: Christie's is holding two Asian art auctions – a live sale on June 13 and an online sale running from June 6-18. And to celebrate the

And to celebrate the centenary of the creation of the Indochina School of Fine Arts in the autumn of 1924, the auction house is putting on an exhibition devoted to Vietnamese art featuring the work of nine well-known artists that will run from June 8-13.

The live auction opens with 16 lots from a private European collection and one of the highlights is this Ming dynasty, Zhengde six-character mark and period, yellow ground blue and white pomegranate flower dish measuring 11%in (30cm) in diameter. The estimate is €100,000-150,000. \bigcirc christies.com

This staging takes place against the two anniversaries of symbolic significance

66

France and China with a special symposium devoted to museums in the 21st century to be attended by curators and directors from around the world. It is also unveiling an exhibition, Au Coeur de la couleur – the monochrome porcelain collection of Hong Kong collector Richard Kan.

Pictured here is a selection of some of the items that will be on offer during Printemps Asiatique in the salerooms and galleries.

Further details of all the participants can be found on the website below.

Left: costume and accessories from the collection of the pianist, painter and social activist Tchen Gi-Vane (1924-2021) will be offered by Aponem at Drouot on June 10. The eldest daughter of Cheng Shewo, a newspaper editor in the Chinese Republic, she left the country for France in 1951 and it was while giving a piano recital in Paris that she met her husband Philippe Bertrand, a former marine officer during the Indo-Chinese war. From 1976 they lived in Rambouillet on the edge of Paris in a pagoda-shaped house.

On offer at Aponem will be 250 lots of her Chinese silk robes, jewels and kingfisher feather hair ornaments dating from the 18th to 20th centuries.

The rarest of the robes are those embroidered in gilt thread and polychrome silks such as this dark yellow silk opera dragon robe worked with nine five clawed dragons chasing sacred pearls – symbols of good fortune and longevity. Dating from the 18th/19th century, it has an estimate of €15,000-18,000.

antiquestradegazette.com

۲

Send international highlights to Anne Crane at annecrane@antiquestradegazette.com

Bonhams is holding four sales (two live and two online) during Printemps Asiatique.

One of these live auctions will be the June 11 sale of 28 statuettes and Buddhist objects belonging to the well-known dealer and collector Jules Speelman. These come from Tibet, Nepal and China and range in date from the 11th-18th centuries.

Pictured below is one of them: a parcel gilt silver and gilt copper alloy statuette of the eight-armed goddess Ushnishavijaya from central Tibet dating from the 17th century.

The 6¾in (17cm) high work, which is attributed to the Newar artisans of the Tashi Lhunpo monastery, has an estimate of €600,000-800,000.

The following day a mixed-owner live offering of around 100 lots of Chinese furniture and works of art will include a rare Tang dynasty silver and part gilt bowl (above) decorated to the interior with a scene of mandarin ducks among flowers and foliage. It has a guide of €60,000-80,000.

bonhams.com

This gilt bronze ritual bell or bianzhong from a set or carillon of musical chimes will be one of the highlights of a sale of Asian art to be held by Tessier Sarrou & Associés at Drouot on June 12.

It dates from the Kangxi era of the Qing dynasty. To aid dynastic harmony the Manchu (Kangxi, Yongzheng and Qianlong) emperors encouraged refined court music which they decided to codify to a national standard. The Kangxi emperor established the first musical system in China in 1713 based around 16 notes divided into 12 for the months of the year and four flats. From this point bells such as these formed part of a carillon ranging in tone from low to high, each one engraved by hand before being gilded.

Tessier Sarrou's 9in (21cm) high bianzhong is of typical barrel shape decorated in finely engraved relief with a central band of two five-clawed dragons flying over frothing waves chasing the sacred pearl and two panels: one inscribed Yi Ze, the other Kang Xi Bing Shen Nian Zhi corresponding to 1716.

The top is surmounted by two coiled dragons standing on their feet with to reveal pointed fangs t has a provenance to the family of Robert de Semallé (1849-1936) who brought it back from China in 1884

Buddhistic sculpture, Chinese paintings and calligraphy, Chinese ceramics and furniture and Vietnamese paintings will all feature in Sotheby's June 14 auction of Asian art.

A highlight of the Vietnamese paintings section will be a newly rediscovered oil on canvas by the artist Nguyễn Phan Chánh (1892-1984). Previously known only through archival records and landmark exhibitions in Hanoi (1930) and Paris (1931), the painting was unearthed in a modest rural French home having been acquired by the current owner's grandfather at the 1931 Paris Exhibition - an inaugural showcase of Vietnamese modernism in the West.

Titled Les Chanteuses de Campagne, the 2ft 11in x 3ft 3in (90cm x 1m) work, which is signed and dated 1930 lower left and also inscribed with a poem in Chinese and has the artist's seal upper left, is estimated at €600,000-900,000. Sothebys.com

Below: Christophe Hioco, who is chairman of Printemps Asiatique and has a Paris gallery on the rue de Phalsbourg, will be among the dealers showing works at the Pagoda. On offer will be this 23in (59cm) high black stone north-east Indian sculpture of the divine couple Uma Mahesvara from the Pala period (9th-10th century). It has a provenance to a private collection in the US, then a Sotheby's auction in 1988 and is priced at €80,000 🕑 galeriehioco.com

Above: JM Bealu & Fils is taking part in Printemps Asiatique from its left bank gallery on the rue du Bac. Among the pieces on show will be this Qianlong period 9in (23.5cm) diameter Chinese plate decorated en grisaille with a scene showing Dutchmen in the foreground attacking a lion with the aid of dogs and, to the background, a walled city with a temple. It is priced at €1500. ➢ bealu.net

25 May 2024 | 43

Above: one of the overseas exhibitors at the Pagoda is Runjeet Singh from Learnington Spa in the UK. He is showing this late 18th century (1780-1800) Indian watercolour, a provincial Mughal work, probably from Awadh, depicting a marine monster devouring an Indian boat. Measuring 8¾ x 6½in (21 x 16.5cm), it has a provenance to a private UK collection; the London dealer Simon Ray in 2011 and prior to that auctions at Bonhams in London in 2010 and Sotheby's New York in 1989. The painting is priced at €24,000. ▶ runjeetsingh.com

antiquestradegazette.com

۲

International France

Left: among the overseas exhibitors taking part in Printemps Asiatique and showing at the Pagoda will be Carton Rochell Asian Art from the US which is bringing this copper alloy group from the Gandharan region (Afghanistan or Pakistan) depicting a divine mother and child playing. It measures just over 8in (20.5cm) in height, has a provenance to a private European collection, acquired in 1996, and is priced at $175,000 (€162,500). 🕑 carltonrochell.com

۲

Above: the Paris Asian art dealership Galerie Valérie Levesque will be exhibiting at Printemps Asiatique from the gallery on the rue des Saints Pères. Works on offer include this pair of covered jadeite bowls dated to the late Qing dynasty (early 20th century). They measure 6in (15.5cm) in width, are finely carved and pierced with foliate and floral motifs and are priced at €9000. ➢ galerievalerielevesque.com

French previews

A highlight of Christie's sale of Old Master paintings in Paris on June 12 will be this still-life by Jean Simeon Chardin (1699-1779), a master of the genre. Le melon entamé, a 22 x 20in (57 x 52cm) oval oil on canvas depicting fruit prominently featuring a large melon with a slice removed, was painted in 1760 and shown at the Salon the following year.

۲

It was displayed alongside its pendant, Le bocal d'abricots (now in the Art Gallery of Ontario, Toronto), and Le Panier de fraises des bois, sold at auction in March 2022 at Artcurial for a hammer price of €20.5m (see ATG No 2536) and now in the Louvre.

The painting was part of the Old Master collection of the Marcille family - father François (1790-1856) and his sons Eudoxe (1814-90) and Camille (1816-75) - who owned 30 paintings by Chardin.

After François' death the two sons divided his collection between them and Christie's painting went to Camille. Following Camille's death in 1875 it was acquired by Stéphane Bourgeois, an art dealer acting on behalf of Baroness Nathaniel de Rothschild (1825-99). It will be offered on June 12 with an estimate of €8m-12m.

➢ christies.com

When Osenat offers the 6th part of the late Jean Louis Noisiez's substantial collection of antique arms, militaria and historic souvenirs in Fontainebleau on May 26, it will feature a section devoted to Michel Ney (1769-1815), probably the most famous of Napoleon's marshals and known as 'The Bravest of the Brave'. One of the highlights will be Ney's Empire period maréchal's baton, left.

The 19in (48cm) wooden baton, which has a dark blue velvet cover embroidered with eagles of slightly later date, is mounted to each end in gold and inscribed TERROR BELLI DECUS PACIS to one side and Michel Ney Nommé par L'Empereur Napoléon Maréchal de l'Empire le 12 Floréal An 12e to the other, with Paris hallmarks for 1798-1809.

> The baton comes in its red leather-covered cardboard case of 1804 decorated in gilt with 42 imperial eagles and secured with silver clasps. From 1961, before it entered the Noisiez collection. Nev's baton was part of the Beaupère collection. The estimate is €200,000-300,000. Solution (Comparison)

۲

A collection discovered during the valuation of a Parisian apartment is to be offered for sale by Daguerre at Drouot in seven auctions with the first to take place on May 31. Running to 1500 lots, assembled over the course of decades, it encompasses an exhaustive overview of fine art from the 16th century to the contemporary era in paintings, drawings, prints, and photographs, as well as sculpture and works of art.

The proceeds from the sales will benefit the Institut Pasteur.

One of the highlights of the first 139-lot auction will be an unpublished painting by Jean-Léon Gérôme (1824-1904). Titled Une Épave, this is not one of the classical or orientalist subjects usually associated with this artist but a more radical scene of a shipwreck showing passengers crowded on a lifeboat, the vessel depicted adrift as a small craft in a vast emerald green and blue sea.

The large 2ft 3in x 3ft 5in (70cm x 1.06m) oil on canvas signed lower left J. L. Gerome has an estimate of €80,000-120,000.

Adaguerre.fr

antiquestradegazette.com

44 25 May 2024